Old Darby and Joan. Lewis Darwin was born at Montreal on the 24th day of September, 1788, and is now 107 years old. His wife was born at a small place not far from Montreal, then known as "Peros' Isle," on the 17th day of March, 1794, and, though in feeble health to-day, the passed her 101st milepost on her journey to the other shore several days ago.

She was totally blind, but a few years ago received her second sight and up to within a recent period she has been able to do her own work, while the old gentleman has, up to the last year, been as spry as a cricket, and could cance an old-fasti-ioned breakdown that would knock the spots offa boy of twenty. He is a typical Frenchman of the old He is a typical Frenchman or the old school-polite as the proverbial French dancing marter. Grandpa Darwin could and did teach etiquette to the lumber boys in the early days of pioneer civilization on Black River, as he has been a resident of this vicinity for fifty years and over.

Although time has dealt gently with him, his frame is shrank and withered and his health it gone.

A Workman's Song.

On seeing two wounded roofers brought into a railroad station after an accident. I'm half way up to heaven, boys, I'm climbing every day. A-screwing bolts and sawing beams—say, does it look like play? The sun and I are bosom friends—I walk as safe with him As you on earth, you tittle ants that dars

And I'm not the man to shirk. So if I should take a tumble by and by. Why that's just the chance of war, It's the flag we're fighting for— Like a soldier struck in battle let me dief The boss he gives his orders, and I take

'em like a man; And if he has a ticklish job I'll get it if I can.
The fun is always at the front, the danger—who knows where? It runs away if you are bold; it trips you

For it's work, boys-work; And I'm not the man to shirk. So if I should take a tumble by and by, Why that's just the chance of war, it's the flag we're fighting for—

I drive the nails in—who does more, or knows the reason why?
I do my part, and if it cuts no figure—what care I?
The world wants work, boys; she is tired of giory and of guns.
Let's buckle down and do the job, and shame to him who runs!

For it's work, boys—work;
And I'm not the man to shirk.
Bo if I should take a tumble by and by,
Why that's just the chance of war,
